

from ^{whom} Jammoranga heard the fate of his sister - Jammoranga according to their Law, was bound to revenge her death - About three years ago when the Corromandel lay in the Thames taking in Timber, Jammoranga determined to send an expedition against the thief at the Southward and gave directions accordingly - His tribe assembled and on their way they stopt at the River Thames in Enakhee's district - Enakhee and Jammoranga were both on board the Corromandel at the time - Jammorangas People while they lay there robbed Enakhees potatoe grounds, and were seen by Enakhee people to carry them away - About a week afterwards Enakhees slaves fell in with a near relation of Jammorangas a chief named Towahka, and killed him - Jammoranga was very much enraged but he was not able to revenge his death at that time - When the Corromandel sailed for Port Jackson Enakhee went to see the Colony in her - When Towhee a thief belonging to Jammorangas tribe determined to revenge the Death of Towahka - In about a month he set off from the Bay of Islands to the Thames - When Towhee arrived he made an attack upon Showpas tribe, who were at amity with Enakhees, and
